Customer Reviews

I nearly didn't buy it because of the bad reviews on UK, but once I looked at the many positive reviews on the main site, I bought it. And I'm glad that I did. I really don't understand why the other reviewers reacted so badly...one reviewer believes in angels, but finds angel feathers implausible, and somehow is upset because Vlad the Impaler and Hitler weren't seen in hell...and I can't see how the book is ludicrous or depressing at all! And for some strange reason the second reviewer seems to think the book is all about glorifying Dr. Lerma, and I have no idea how they got that impression! The book is simply a record of the observations and experiences of the terminal patients of a hospice doctor. These people who are going to die see things that others normally don't and share these experiences with doctors who won't turn around and say to them "You're barking mad...as in Woof Woof!" Why would any patient tell these very strange experiences to someone as rude as that. Every story I read made me weep because of the positive effects these patient's experiences of 'heaven' and 'angels' had on themselves, their families and me, a reader of the book. You won't like it if you think there is ONE religion or belief system that is the ONLY way to God...in fact, these different stories point to the broadness of the love of God. The first story is about a nine-year old boy dying of cancer, and how his experiences brought his family back to a positive perspective for life and hope, by giving them a faith in Jesus. The second is how a Jewish family's 4 year old son sees angels with the spirit of his two year old brother who has just died, which comforts the family and their synagogue.
